

identifying data deleted to prevent clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy

PUBLIC COPY

U.S. Department of Homeland Security
U.S. Immigration and Citizenship Services
Office of Administrative Appeals
20 Massachusetts Avenue, N.W., MS 2090
Washington, DC 20529-2090
U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services

H2

Date: FEB 01 2012

Office: LOS ANGELES

FILE: [REDACTED]

IN RE:

Applicant: [REDACTED]

APPLICATION: Application for Waiver of Grounds of Inadmissibility under section 212(h) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(h)

ON BEHALF OF APPLICANT:

INSTRUCTIONS:

This is the decision of the Administrative Appeals Office in your case. All documents have been returned to the office that originally decided your case. Any further inquiry must be made to that office.

If you believe the law was inappropriately applied by us in reaching our decision, or you have additional information that you wish to have considered, you may file a motion to reconsider or a motion to reopen. The specific requirements for filing such a request can be found at 8 C.F.R. § 103.5. All motions must be submitted to the office that originally decided your case by filing a Form I-290B, Notice of Appeal or Motion, with a fee of $630. Please be aware that 8 C.F.R. § 103.5(a)(1)(i) requires that any motion must be filed within 30 days of the decision that the motion seeks to reconsider or reopen.

Thank you,

Michael Shumway
for Perry Rhew
Chief, Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The waiver application was denied by the Field Office Director, Los Angeles, California, and is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The applicant is a native and citizen of Guatemala who was found to be inadmissible under section 212(a)(2)(A)(i)(I) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(2)(A)(i)(I), for having been convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude. The director indicated that the applicant sought a waiver of inadmissibility pursuant to section 212(h) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(h). The director concluded that the applicant had failed to establish that his bar to admission would impose extreme hardship on a qualifying relative, and denied the Application for Waiver of Grounds of Inadmissibility (Form I-601) accordingly.

On appeal, counsel contends that the applicant does not require a waiver as he is not inadmissible under section 212(a)(6)(C) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(6)(C), for committing fraud or willful misrepresentation. Counsel claims that the applicant was convicted of possession of a driver license that was not his, and that misrepresentation under section 212(a)(6)(C) of the Act is for fraud and misrepresentation related to immigration benefits and that possession of someone else's driver license is not an immigration benefit.

Counsel's assertion that the applicant's waiver was for inadmissibility under section 212(a)(6)(C) of the Act is not correct. The field office director analyzed the applicant's waiver under section 212(h) of the Act, which relates to inadmissibility for crimes involving moral turpitude, because the applicant was convicted of possession of an identification document with intent to defraud the United States in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1028(a)(4). The field office director found that the applicant's crime involved moral turpitude, rendering him inadmissible under section 212(a)(2)(A) of the Act.

The AAO will first address the field office director's finding of inadmissibility.

Section 212(a)(2)(A) of the Act states, in pertinent parts:

- (i) [A]ny alien convicted of, or who admits having committed, or who admits committing acts which constitute the essential elements of –
 - (I) a crime involving moral turpitude (other than a purely political offense) or an attempt or conspiracy to commit such a crime . . . is inadmissible.

The Board of Immigration Appeals (Board) held in Matter of Perez-Contreras, 20 I&N Dec. 615, 617-18 (BIA 1992), that:

[M]oral turpitude is a nebulous concept, which refers generally to conduct that shocks the public conscience as being inherently base, vile, or depraved, contrary to the rules of morality and the duties owed between man and man, either one's fellow man or society in general....

In determining whether a crime involves moral turpitude, we consider whether the act is accompanied by a vicious motive or corrupt mind. Where knowing or intentional conduct is an element of an offense, we have found moral turpitude to be present. However, where the required mens rea may not be determined from the statute, moral turpitude does not inhere.

(Citations omitted.)

To determine if a crime involves moral turpitude, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals first applies the categorical approach. Nunez v. Holder, 594 F.3d 1124, 1129 (9th Cir. 2010) (citing Nicanor-Romero v. Mukasey, 523 F.3d 992, 999 (9th Cir.2008)). This approach requires analyzing the elements of the crime to determine whether all of the proscribed conduct involves moral turpitude. Nicanor-Romero, supra at 999. In Nicanor-Romero, the Ninth Circuit states that in making this determination there must be "a realistic probability, not a theoretical possibility, that the statute would be applied to reach conduct that did not involve moral turpitude. Id. at 1004 (quoting Gonzales v. Duenas-Alvarez, 549 U.S. 183, 193 (2007)). A realistic probability can be established by showing that, in at least one other case, which includes the alien's own case, the state courts applied the statute to conduct that did not involve moral turpitude. Id. at 1004-05. See also Matter of Silva-Trevino, 24 I&N Dec. 687 (A.G. 2008) (whether an offense categorically involves moral turpitude requires reviewing the criminal statute to determine if there is a "realistic probability, not a theoretical possibility," that the statute would be applied to conduct that is not morally turpitudinous).

However, if a case exists in which the criminal statute in question was applied to conduct that does not involve moral turpitude, "the adjudicator cannot categorically treat all convictions under that statute as convictions for crimes that involve moral turpitude." Matter of Silva Trevino, 24 I&N Dec. 687, 697 (A.G. 2008) (citing Duenas-Alvarez, 549 U.S. at 185-88, 193). An adjudicator then engages in a second-stage inquiry in which the adjudicator reviews the "record of conviction" to determine if the conviction was based on conduct involving moral turpitude. Id. at 698-699, 703-704, 708. The record of conviction consists of documents such as the indictment, the judgment of conviction, jury instructions, a signed guilty plea, and the plea transcript. Id. at 698, 704, 708.

If review of the record of conviction is inconclusive, an adjudicator then considers any additional evidence deemed necessary or appropriate to resolve accurately the moral turpitude question. 24 I&N Dec. at 699-704, 708-709. However, this "does not mean that the parties would be free to present any and all evidence bearing on an alien's conduct leading to the conviction. (citation omitted). The sole purpose of the inquiry is to ascertain the nature of the prior conviction; it is not an invitation to relitigate the conviction itself." Id. at 703.

With regards to following Silva-Trevino in the Ninth Circuit, the Board stated recently "Since the Ninth Circuit . . . has not rejected Silva-Trevino, we will follow the approach set forth in the Attorney General's opinion." Matter of Guevara Alvaro, 25 I&N Dec. 417, 423 (BIA 2011).

At the time of the applicant's conviction on January 24, 2005, 18 U.S.C. § 1028 provided, in pertinent part:

Fraud and related activity in connection with identification documents, authentication features, and information

(a) Whoever, in a circumstance described in subsection (c) of this section . . .

(4) knowingly possesses an identification document (other than one issued lawfully for the use of the possessor), authentication feature, or a false identification document, with the intent such document or feature be used to defraud the United States;

(b) The punishment for an offense under subsection (a) of this section is--

(1) except as provided in paragraphs (3) and (4), a fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 15 years, or both, if the offense is . . .

Mere possession of fraudulent immigration documents is not a crime involving moral turpitude, but knowing possession with the intent to defraud the United States government is. See Matter of H-and Y-, 3 I&N Dec. 236 (CO. 1948); Matter of Serna, 20 I&N Dec. 579, 586 (BIA 1992). The applicant's conviction under 18 U.S.C. § 1028(a)(4) is categorically a crime involving moral turpitude since his offense involves the intent to defraud the U.S. government. Accordingly, the applicant is inadmissible under section 212(a)(2)(A)(i)(I) of the Act for having been convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude.

The waiver for inadmissibility under section 212(a)(2)(A)(i)(I) of the Act is under section 212(h) of the Act. That section provides, in pertinent part:

(h) The Attorney General [Secretary of Homeland Security] may, in his discretion, waive the application of subparagraph (A)(i)(I) . . . of subsection (a)(2) . . . if -

. . .

(B) in the case of an immigrant who is the spouse, parent, son, or daughter of a citizen of the United States or an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence if it is established to the satisfaction of the Attorney General [Secretary] that the alien's denial of admission would result in extreme hardship to the United States citizen or lawfully resident spouse, parent, son, or daughter of such alien . . .

A section 212(h) waiver of the bar to admission resulting from violation of section 212(a)(2)(A)(i)(I) of the Act is dependent first upon a showing that the bar imposes an extreme hardship to the citizen or lawfully resident spouse, parent, son, or daughter of the applicant. Hardship to the applicant is not a consideration under the statute and will be considered only to the extent that it results in hardship to a qualifying relative. The qualifying relative in this case is the applicant's U.S. citizen spouse. If extreme hardship to the qualifying relative is established, the Secretary then assesses whether an exercise of discretion is warranted. See Matter of Mendez-Moralez, 21 I&N Dec. 296 (BIA 1996).

Extreme hardship is “not a definable term of fixed and inflexible content or meaning,” but “necessarily depends upon the facts and circumstances peculiar to each case.” Matter of Hwang, 10 I&N Dec. 448, 451 (BIA 1964). In Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez, the Board provided a list of factors it deemed relevant in determining whether an alien has established extreme hardship to a qualifying relative. 22 I&N Dec. 560, 565 (BIA 1999). The factors include the presence of a lawful permanent resident or United States citizen spouse or parent in this country; the qualifying relative’s family ties outside the United States; the conditions in the country or countries to which the qualifying relative would relocate and the extent of the qualifying relative’s ties in such countries; the financial impact of departure from this country; and significant conditions of health, particularly when tied to an unavailability of suitable medical care in the country to which the qualifying relative would relocate. Id. The Board added that not all of the foregoing factors need be analyzed in any given case and emphasized that the list of factors was not exclusive. Id. at 566.

The Board has also held that the common or typical results of removal and inadmissibility do not constitute extreme hardship, and has listed certain individual hardship factors considered common rather than extreme. These factors include: economic disadvantage, loss of current employment, inability to maintain one’s present standard of living, inability to pursue a chosen profession, separation from family members, severing community ties, cultural readjustment after living in the United States for many years, cultural adjustment of qualifying relatives who have never lived outside the United States, inferior economic and educational opportunities in the foreign country, or inferior medical facilities in the foreign country. See generally Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez, 22 I&N Dec. at 568; Matter of Pilch, 21 I&N Dec. 627, 632-33 (BIA 1996); Matter of Ige, 20 I&N Dec. 880, 883 (BIA 1994); Matter of Ngai, 19 I&N Dec. 245, 246-47 (Comm’r 1984); Matter of Kim, 15 I&N Dec. 88, 89-90 (BIA 1974); Matter of Shaughnessy, 12 I&N Dec. 810, 813 (BIA 1968).

However, though hardships may not be extreme when considered abstractly or individually, the Board has made it clear that “[r]elevant factors, though not extreme in themselves, must be considered in the aggregate in determining whether extreme hardship exists.” Matter of O-J-O-, 21 I&N Dec. 381, 383 (BIA 1996) (quoting Matter of Ige, 20 I&N Dec. at 882). The adjudicator “must consider the entire range of factors concerning hardship in their totality and determine whether the combination of hardships takes the case beyond those hardships ordinarily associated with deportation.” Id.

The actual hardship associated with an abstract hardship factor such as family separation, economic disadvantage, cultural readjustment, et cetera, differs in nature and severity depending on the unique circumstances of each case, as does the cumulative hardship a qualifying relative experiences as a result of aggregated individual hardships. See, e.g., Matter of Bing Chih Kao and Mei Tsui Lin, 23 I&N Dec. 45, 51 (BIA 2001) (distinguishing Matter of Pilch regarding hardship faced by qualifying relatives on the basis of variations in the length of residence in the United States and the ability to speak the language of the country to which they would relocate). For example, though family separation has been found to be a common result of inadmissibility or removal, separation from family living in the United States can also be the most important single hardship factor in considering hardship in the aggregate. See Salcido-Salcido, 138 F.3d at 1293 (quoting Contreras-Buenfil v. INS, 712 F.2d 401, 403 (9th Cir. 1983)); but see Matter of Ngai, 19 I&N Dec. at 247 (separation of spouse and children from applicant not extreme hardship due to conflicting evidence in the record and because applicant and spouse had been voluntarily separated from one another for 28 years). Therefore, we consider the totality of the circumstances in determining whether denial of admission would result in extreme hardship to a qualifying relative.

In rendering this decision, the AAO will consider all of the evidence in the record.¹

The record shows that the applicant married his wife in March 2005. The submitted financial documentation reflects that the applicant's wife was employed as a full-time administrative assistant in 2006, earning $24.00 per hour, that she had health insurance through her employer, and that she and her husband owned a house together. Former counsel conveyed that the applicant's wife never lived or worked in Guatemala and that all of the applicant's wife's family members reside in the United States. Former counsel stated that the applicant's wife is concerned about living in Guatemala due to its crime, poor economy, and its unhealthy environmental conditions, as well as having to give up financial and family ties to the United States. Former counsel indicated that the applicant's immediate relatives are in the United States.

The asserted hardship factors in the instant case are emotional and financial in nature. We find that, in view of the submitted wage statements of the applicant's wife the applicant has not demonstrated that his wife will experience financial hardship without his income. In regard to living in Guatemala, the applicant has not submitted any documentation corroborating his wife's concerns about personal safety as well as economic and environmental conditions in Guatemala. We acknowledge that the applicant's wife will experience emotional hardship if she remains in the United States without her husband or if she separates from her family members in the United States. As presented in this case, these hardships are the common result of inadmissibility. When the hardship factors are considered collectively, they do not demonstrate extreme hardship to the applicant's wife if she remained in the United States without her husband. Additionally, the collective hardship factors do not demonstrate that the applicant's wife would experience extreme hardship if she joined her husband to live in Guatemala.

Having found the applicant statutorily ineligible for relief, no purpose would be served in discussing whether he merits a waiver as a matter of discretion.

In proceedings for application for waiver of grounds of inadmissibility under section 212(h) of the Act, the burden of proving eligibility rests with the applicant. See section 291 of the Act. Here, the applicant has not met that burden. Accordingly, the appeal will be dismissed and the waiver application will be denied.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.

¹ USCIS has received information that the applicant and his spouse are now divorced, which, if true, would result in the revocation of the approved Form I-130 and render the present appeal moot. However, as this information has not yet been verified, and we find in this decision that the applicant does not merit a waiver of inadmissibility based on the evidence of hardship submitted previously, we will not address this issue further at this time.